This collection of maps has been culled from the pre-Grouping and Grouped Railways' Timetables from the archives of the National Railway Museum, York and of Ian Allan. It is interspersed by interesting cover illustrations and advertisement pages to reflect the atmosphere of yesteryear railways.

Railway Maps of Yesteryear

A study of railway cartography shows that during the last hundred years fairly accurately geographical maps of railway systems have degenerated — and I use the word advisedly — into diagrammatic representations of passenger train services. Currently, indeed, for some years the railway authorities have not produced anything remotely like a system map of realistic proportions or accurately defined junctions, which so often appear as some sort of cross roads, giving no indication of the actual layout.

This was unheard of in days of yore when every company claimed cartographically at least twice as much territory as it actually owned or served but always clearly defined its junctions, avoiding lines, spurs and in some cases even extended loops. In the pages which follow this is graphically set out, never more so than in the London area where practically every railway line was claimed as its own by every company!

We have secured timetable maps for each of the major pre-grouping companies and these mostly pre-date the 1914-18 war whilst those in respect of the Big Four were published just before the Second World War. Included are some of the magnificently illustrated timetable front covers which really are works of art in their own right, whilst some of the contemporary advertisements evince a reflection of those spacious days when one could spend the night in a luxury hotel, have dinner and still have ample change from a sovereign.

Maps played a big part in the general publicity of the early railways when no doubt Joe Public was either better educated in their use or had more time to study them and as can be seen from the LB&SCR's advertisement for "luggage-in-advance", the opportunity was seized to publish a railway map of the entire London area including stations underground whence no "PLA" could ever have been delivered. Maps and public relations were virtually inseparably intertwined.

I have had a personal love of maps as far back as I can remember and it has, therefore, given me the greatest pleasure to plunder my own collection and to work with the National Railway Museum at York to whom I express my appreciation of their unstinted co-operation to produce this compilation of maps as a tribute to the artists of the past who produced these fascinating if slightly fictional representations of their companies' territory.

The N.R.M.

The National Railway Museum Library & Archive is one of Britain's major reference sources for the study of railway history. The National Railway Museum has, since its opening in 1975, built up important collections of books, maps, archives and pictures which detail the historical and technical development of locomotives and rolling stock and reflect the growth of railway services in the United Kingdom.

The Collections

The Printed Book Collection contains most of the important works on railway development in Britain and includes some titles on overseas railways, particularly in the USA, France and Germany.

The Periodical Collection of over 500 titles, includes transactions of professional institutions such as the Institution of Locomotive Engineers, journals concerning the financial and technical aspects of the railway industry, such as Hearapath's Railway Magazine which dates from 1835, journals of railway study societies and magazines published for the railway enthusiast.

The Timetable Collection contains both working and public timetables from the 1840s to the present day. Bradshaw, the father of railway timetables, is well represented with copies from 1840 to 1961. The Midland weekly notices running from 1886 to 1922 give a detailed picture of the daily operation of Britain's third largest railway. Also represented are a range of timetables from all the major pre-nationalisation railway companies and after 1948 from British Rail.

Government Publications include the Board of Trade Railway Returns from 1858 to 1922 which contain a wealth of statistical information including the numbers and classes of passengers carried, the totals of locomotives, carriages and wagons in stock at the end of the year and the nature and quantity of goods carried by each railway company. The series is continued after 1922 with the Ministry of Transport Statistics, the British Transport Commission Report and Accounts and the British Railways Board Report and Accounts. The library also has copies of the official railway accident reports from 1855 and a series of Railway Clearing House publications including handbooks, regulations, maps and junction diagram books.

The Photograph Collection contains around ¾ million negatives and over 100 different collections. The negatives date from 1866 to the present day and range in format from 35mm film to 18" x 16" glass plates. The photographs were taken by the larger railway companies for official record purposes and by enthusiastic amateurs. The diverse topics covered by the railway photographers reflect the once considerable diversity of railway operations. Many negatives especially of locomotives and rolling stock are strictly formal in nature, but others reflect the working and social conditions of the railways at the time. A selection of reference prints can be consulted in the Reading Room.

The Archive Collections consist largely of technical material concerning the development of locomotives and rolling stock and includes specifications, reports, correspondence and drawings. Copies of technical drawings and track plans are available from the microfilmed collection which can be consulted in the Reading Room. Catalogues are available on request. Telephone (0904) 621261 ext 236.

The Pictorial Collection contains paintings, prints and engravings illustrating, in some detail, the growth of the railway industry from 1825 onwards. Of particular interest are the wash drawings of J. C. Bourne of the London & Birmingham Railway and paintings by Spencer Gore, Stanhope Forbes, Edna Lumb and other well known artists. The pictorial collection is rich in works depicting the impact of the railways on the landscape and on people's lives and contains a fine series of original railway poster art work. Photographic reference prints of the collection can be consulted in the Library Reading Room.

The Poster, Notices and Handbills Collection contains several thousand items from the early nineteenth century to the present day with particularly good coverage for the years between the First and Second World Wars. The posters capture various aspects of British life and work from holiday making to golf, track laying to signalling, refreshment cars to boat trains. Reference prints of the collection can be consulted in the Library Reading Room.

The Sound Archive contains a growing number of audio cassettes of interviews with railway employees from Sir William Stanier, Chief Mechanical Engineer of the London, Midland and Scottish Railway to signalmen and engine drivers. The cassettes can be heard in the Library Reading Room using the tape deck and headphones provided.

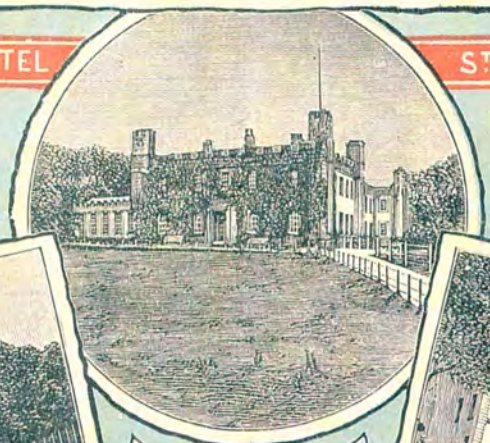
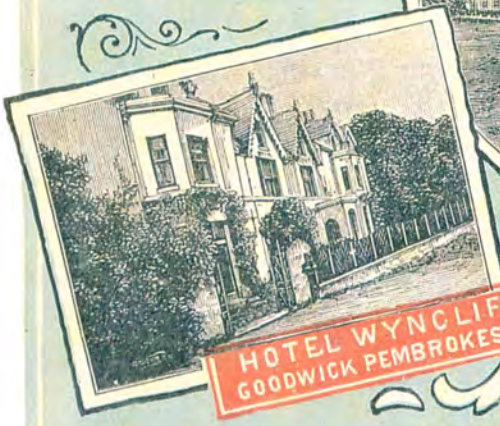
TREGENNA CASTLE HOTEL — ST IVES, CORNWALL.



THIS well-known Mansion is situated in the centre of St. Ives Bay, and is opened as a First-class Family Hotel. It stands in its own grounds of nearly 100 acres. Excellent bathing. Private suites of Apartments. The Public Rooms are Coffee Room, Reading Room, Drawing Room, Smoking Room, Billiard Room and Lounge. Moderate charges.



HOTEL WYNCLIFFE, GOODWICK PEMBROKESHIRE.

THIS Hotel is situated in its own private grounds on the cliff-side, facing the sea, due south, and commanding delightful views of the Bay of Fishguard and surrounding landscape.

Boarding terms, &c., Good Stabling.

SOUTH WALES HOTEL, NEW MILFORD.

THE South Wales Hotel is immediately adjacent to the New Milford Terminus, and is pleasantly situated on rising ground, overlooking Milford Haven. Ornamental grounds intervene between the Hotel and the Station, so that, although sufficiently near for convenience, the Hotel is far enough away from the Station to prevent the Railway traffic being an annoyance. The Hotel contains spacious Coffee Room, Private Sitting Rooms, and Billiard Room. Moderate charges.

Telegrams will be sent free of charge for Apartments, &c., to be reserved at any of the Company's Hotels, on Passengers stating their requirements to the Station Master at any of the Company's principal Stations.

Hotel Porters meet all principal Trains, and convey Passengers' Luggage to and from the Hotels free of charge.

Revised Tariffs on application to the respective Managers, or to Mr. S. D. BUOTT, Manager, Hotels and Refreshment Rooms Department, Great Western Royal Hotel, Paddington Station.
